William Grey & Co., Limited West Hartlepool, the Conch has a gross toppage of 3 555, net 2 318; her engines are of 3 0 horse power and 1400 indicated : and she carries 4824 tons of oil and 680 tons of bunker coal. The following description of the steamer is taken from a home paper: -'The vessel is built under Lloyd's highest classes on the three deck rule, with long poop and topyallant forecastle. Her dim-" ensions are as follows: - Length ever all, 349 feet; brendth extreme, 43 feet; depth. 28 feet. The orgine and boiler rooms are in the after part of the vessel, and underneath them there is a double bottom for water ballast. The forward and after peaks are also fitted for water bullast for -trimming purposes. Forward of the boiler room there are nine strong transverse bulkheads, and also a very strong fore and aft bulkhead from the keel to the main deck. Altogether there are 11 separate oil tanks. These oil tanks are separated from the boiler room and bunkers aft. and from the cargo hold forward, by large cofferdams which are carried to the topmost deck in each case, and which can be filled with water when required, and they are under the control of special and separate pumps placed on deck. Expansion tranks are carried up from the middle of each oil compartment to allow the oil to rise and fall with varying temporature. These trupks, in conjunction with large hatchways, are used for loading general cargoes. Two powerful pamps are fitted in the pumproom smidships for discharging the oil surgo, They are capable of pumping ont the entire cargo of over 4,400 tons of oil in 12 hours, and will also nump water. from the sea to fill the oil tanks when required for belieft. When the oil enrge has been discharged, the tanks will be releansed and adapted to receive general cargo by special means provided. powerful fan will be fitted capable of exhibitating the siz from each tank in 10 minutes in order to thoroughly ventilate the compartments when filled with general cargo, the exhaust air being delivered through, a cowl above the deck. The vessel is fitted throughout with an electric light installation—the whole of the cabin. sugine and boiler room, galley, chart and wheelkouse, binnacle and telegraph being included: in addition she has a 20-inch projector, and the necessary lighting for navigating the Suez Canal at night. In order that all parts of the ship may be thoroughly examined after cargo has been discharged, she is also provided with a number of portable electric lamps. The cabin and forecastle and petty officers' rooms are all heated by steam so as to svold any risk of fire. The accommodation for captain and officers and the saloon are under the poop deck; the engineers' rooms are in a large house on deck aft, and the crsw are housed in the forecastle. A patent steam steering goar is fitted amidships and screw gear aft. She is provided with patent steam windless, two donkey boilers, patent stockless anchors and, in addition to all necessary fittings and outfit for the oil trade, there is a complete outfit for working general cargoes, including five steam winchos. Three masts are fitted, and neatly rigged, and awnings, al fore and aft, for the Eastern olimate. Great care has been taken to ensure strong and sound work. The rivetting is closely spaced in shell plating, decks, and bulkheads; and in order to reduce as far as possible the number of joints in way of the oil tanks, most of the shell plates are nearly 30 feet long. The vessel is fitted with B powerful set of triple-exercise the well bear . __usion engines.

The visitors were shown over the steamer by Captain Arnold and Chief Engineer McCuaig. After the inspection the party sat down to cake and wine, and success to the Conch and to the new venture was drunk on the proposition of Mr J. Kramer. Captain Arnold expressed the opinion unreservedly that, with ordinary procaution, the carriage of kerosine oil in bulk in took steamers was quite safe, and as the dvantages of the method were more fully recognised they would be more appreciatand as opposition was worn down success would attend the efforts of the pioneer Company.
